Creating engaging newsletters with your curated content is really easy.The invention relates to a method and to an apparatus for automatic detection of the presence of a vehicle. In vehicle traffic, the automatic detection of the presence of a vehicle in the vehicle's own lane is of particular importance. Vehicles running along a highway leave black marks as a result of the interaction between the vehicle surface and the air flowing around the vehicle. These marks are generally referred to as wind noise. The wind noise occurs when the preceding vehicle is making a turn and then continues to sweep through the following vehicle, partially or fully. In addition to the wind noise, the air flowing around the vehicle in its own lane gives rise to a sound generally called a noise. This noise may be caused by a subsequent vehicle running in a lane next to the lane that is swept by the preceding vehicle. As a result of the interaction between the air flowing around the vehicle and the vehicle surface, a sound is generated, the intensity of which is dependent on the magnitude of the
