That is, provided the winning homebuyer enters contract. Some of the initial tax breaks in the industrial property sales tax deduction (ICS) system were in effect for a while and the ICS paid out some $30 million in 2016. This year, ICS will be around until at least 2023. The $30 million it paid out has been replaced by a $20 million ICS surcharge, starting in 2018. It is this additional surcharge that will drive the first sales, if they occur, through 2023. While the ICS might be dead, the industrial property sales tax (IMS) remains. Its impact on sales is far less than the ICS but, if the IMS isn't renewed by 2023, the surplus money from the ICS surcharge will be on the table to keep new-build cost at a minimum and drive IMS sales until IMS expires 2023. So, watch this space in 2017
