None of the bodies have been found so far, but police sources said the ¥55,000 in ransom was to be paid at a certain time by an individual named "Mr. G" who had been watching the office. Monomeric 3-methylsulphanylbenzaldehyde is a competitive antagonist of selective kappa-opioid agonist-induced antinociception in the tail-flick test in the mouse. In order to assess the role of central opioid receptors in the antinociceptive activity of 3-methylsulphanylbenzaldehyde (3MSB), the compound was administered SC to mice s.c. The intensity of tail-flick analgesia induced by an analgesic dose (ED50, 0.30 microgram/10 microliter) of U50,488H was determined. When administered SC, 3MSB produced dose-dependent increases in tail-flick latencies, which were blocked by i.p. administration of naloxone (0.01 mg/kg). When administered 10 min before U50,488H (0.30 micrograms/10 microliter), 3MSB also increased the ED50 dose (16 micrograms) for the agent by more than 20-fold. In contrast, 3MSB (10 and 100 micrograms/10 microliters) when given 10 or 30 min, respectively, before U50,488H, failed to modify the ED50 for the agent. These results suggest that 3MSB is a non-competitive antagonist at central mu-opioid receptors in mice.
