It is the third most popular team sport in the world after football and cricket, played professionally by 17 countries in the world, and widely regarded as an official sport by the International Basketball Federation, FIBA, the world governing body for basketball. Basketball is the world's second most popular sport, and the most popular sport in the United States. The International Basketball Federation has 6 members and its headquarters are in Brussels, Belgium. The International Olympic Committee has recognized basketball as a sport for the Olympic Games. History American football (sometimes called gridiron football) grew significantly in popularity after the 1880s, largely due to the sport being adopted by colleges and universities during the late 1800s and early 1900s. However, the sport still remained a niche sport in the 1920s and 1930s. Through the 1930s, the sport was dominated by colleges and universities, though professional teams were being formed. The 1938 National Football League champion Chicago Bears were the first fully professional football team.[1] In those early years of professional football, the New York Giants (who are now known as the New York Football Giants) were the most successful team in the league.
