Word Workout is a very creative tool that can help you learn new words, as well as it's variants. In fact, this application allows you to simply test your knowledge in a word puzzle similar to Scrabble. The main idea behind the application is to help you expand your grammar skills and learn new words by creating your own puzzles. The application is easy to install, meaning that you do not need to download anything and you can simply run the program straight away. Furthermore, it does not take a lot of your computer resources, as the application does not have many files, as it is a lightweight application. When the screen is off the keyboard takes over the screen. How can I have the keyboard dim the screen when the screen is off but switch back when the screen is on again? A: This is a common, annoying issue on a lot of LG and Samsung phones (and maybe other phones too) that I have a solution for. This is what the screen looks like when the phone is on: And this is what it looks like when the phone is off: As you can see, the issue you are describing happens because the screen goes off but the keyboard is still on. To fix this, you need to turn off any auto-brightness/auto-lock settings. For example, on a Samsung phone with "S Camera" turned on, you'd disable the auto-brightness setting. You can also disable the auto-lock settings if you want. Then, when you turn the phone back on, it will go back to the settings you want. A: You could try setting your keyboard to "Auto-Brightness" instead of "Normal" and see if that works. This will keep your screen from dimming on off even if the brightness setting is off. I would be surprised if that didn't work for you. Maybe you could try disabling the auto-brightness or auto-lock while in the setting where you can change brightness.
