Note You have to have a Graphics card that supports hardware-accelerated color-correction capabilities in order to use the Adjustments panel in Photoshop. On the computer I use this book on, the Graphics card was a NVIDIA Quadro FX 570M. For more information, see Warning #1 on Warning #1. Figure 12-1. A pop-out help icon lets you jump to a tutorial on any part of the Adjustments panel.

Adobe Photoshop is an amazing collection of tools that specialize in image editing. After three major releases and countless months of development, Photoshop is powerful enough to edit photos from a compact camera to phones to high-resolution cameras. Photoshop comes in a number of different flavors. The basic version of the software is free to use while a variety of packages offer advanced features. All versions of Photoshop offer the same powerful tools, but they come with different add-ons depending on your personal needs. Although Photoshop is powerful, basic users with little computer knowledge can learn how to use it without much effort. Learning Photoshop will equip them with the ability to make higher-quality photos and modify the images on their own. If you want to get the most out of Photoshop, you're going to need to spend some time learning to use it. It's a complex software, but most editing tasks can be done with only a few clicks of your mouse. This Photoshop tutorial covers the basics of the program and how to use Photoshop's basic features for easy photo editing. What is Photoshop? Based on the success of Photoshop, Adobe created the popular graphic design program InDesign. It was the first to utilize similar tools to Photoshop, which allowed for easier transitioning. Now, we see a new flagship program, Adobe Lightroom, which is similar to Photoshop and can also be used to edit photos. Photoshop, along with other programs like Lightroom and Photoshop Elements, is used by photographers, web designers, graphic designers, video editors and others. Adobe Photoshop is a bit more complex than InDesign because of its wide array of tools and features. Photoshop allows you to edit photos and other images. You can resize, create a logo, trim up your photos and more. You can even combine your photos, a fun feature for editing a simple photo into a full-blown collage. Photoshop also works with text and digital scrapbooking. Adobe Photoshop is also a fantastic photo editing tool for more advanced users. They can even create icons, videos, and do even more fancy editing that can be done in Lightroom or even the web-based editing tool Pixlr. These programs also make it easy for designers to create mockups and prototypes using Photoshop. The final reason Photoshop is so popular is because you can save a photo in a variety of formats. Photoshop can open files in the TIFF, JPEG, GIF, BMP, 05a79cecff

Occurrence of the four most frequent C677T mutations among the Vietnamese population. The C677T mutation in the MTHFR gene causes a decrease in MTHFR enzyme activity and reduced protective effect against thrombotic disease. This study aimed to determine the frequency of the four most prevalent MTHFR mutations (C677T, A1298C, G1057A, and A2756G) among patients with DVT and/or pulmonary thromboembolism (PTE) in the Vietnamese population, and their association with thrombophilia risk factors. Between May and November 2009, we recruited 392 consecutive DVT patients with either factor V Leiden (FVL) (n = 60), protein C deficiency (PCD) (n = 37), or protein S deficiency (PSD) (n = 141) from four hospitals and 265 consecutive PTE patients with a normal coagulation profile from four public hospitals. MTHFR mutations were identified using DNA samples obtained from the EDTA anticoagulated blood of these patients. We found that the prevalence of the C677T mutation was 76.4% (259/332) in all our patients with DVT, 94.3% (36/38) in FVL, 79.3% (28/35) in PCD, and 60.9% (53/88) in PSD. The C677T mutation was not identified in any of the 265 patients with PTE. The A1298C mutation was identified in 37.6% (123/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 25.0% (9/36) of the FVL heterozygotes, 8.8% (3/35) of the PCD heterozygotes, and 10.2% (5/49) of the PSD heterozygotes. The G1057A mutation was identified in 44.2% (147/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 34.6% (13/38) of the FVL heterozygotes, 5.7% (2/36) of the PCD heterozygotes, and 36.7% (17/47) of the PSD heterozygotes. The A2756G mutation was identified in 7.0% (23/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 1.1% (4/36) of the FVL heterozygotes, 3.6%

Use of the upper gastrointestinal contrast agent, gas-filled microbubble, to evaluate aortic distensibility in children. Abdominal aortic diameter changes (e.g., distensibility) have been shown to be useful for evaluating vascular function in adults. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the utility of the gas-filled microbubble contrast agent for measuring aortic distensibility in children. Thoracic aortic diameters were measured by ultrasound and the contrast agent, microbubble, was used to measure aortic distensibility in 12 children. Radiologists, sonographers, and radiographers were blinded to the child's identity. Aortic cross-sectional area (CSA) (cm<sup>2</sup>) was measured at 4 different sites to obtain values for proximal, mid, and distal abdominal aortic areas (AAA), as well as the AAA to CSA ratio. Microbubble contrast agent (MediVet, Bracco) was administered intravenously as per label instructions. The patients received 4 (median) distension-preparation cycles (first, second, third, and fourth cycles) followed by 4 repositioning cycles. The fourth cycle was the first repositioning cycle post-administration of the contrast agent. Distensibility was calculated by dividing the change in CSA (cm<sup>2</sup>) over the same abdominal area (e.g., AAA) for each positioning cycle by the CSA for the first positioning cycle (see Additional file 1). The average difference in the AAA to CSA ratio between the different positioning cycles was +4.0% (SD=6.2%) and ranged from -11.7% to +26.8%. The average difference between the first and fourth positioning cycles was +10.5% (SD=15.0%) and ranged from -40.5% to +51.7%. When the change in AAA to CSA ratio was normalized relative to the first positioning cycle, the average difference was +10.2% (SD=10.5%) and ranged from -40.5% to +22.1%. The gas-filled microbubble contrast agent has the potential for evaluating distensibility in children using ultrasound. Additional refinement is needed for this technique to be useful for evaluating children, particularly for measuring intraindividual changes over time.
